In this rhyming book, Lady Pancake and Sir French Toast race through the refrigerator to claim the last drop of maple syrup. Along the way, they must brave a mountain of mashed potatoes, an avalanche of beans, and other perils—as they learn a valuable lesson about sharing.

■ Plants Can't Sit Still

(Rebecca E. Hirsch)

While plants don't walk or talk, they do move! Your youngster will be delighted to learn that plants climb fences, tunnel underground, wiggle, and squirm.

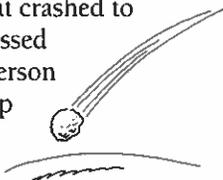

This nonfiction picture book shows sunflowers turning toward the sun, a Venus flytrap snatching a fly, and more.

■ Eerie Elementary: The School Is Alive (Jack Chabert)

When Sam becomes a hall monitor at school, he thinks his job is to watch the students. Then he discovers that he's actually supposed to stop the creepy school building from eating students! The first book in the Eerie Elementary series. (Also available in Spanish.)

■ How the Meteorite Got to the Museum (Jessie Hartland)

Young readers can chant along with the repeating lines of this nonfiction book. The story follows the journey of a meteorite that crashed to Earth and was passed from person to person before winding up in a museum.

Ask your own questions

“Will the little elephant make a friend?” “How many volcanoes are there in the world?” Asking and answering her own questions can boost your youngster's comprehension as she reads or listens to a book. Suggest these strategies for each stage of the reading process.

Before

Encourage your child to think of questions before she even opens the book. Say there's a girl with a bike on the front cover, and the back cover says she got a job to pay for the bike. Perhaps your youngster will wonder, “What kind of job did the girl get?” or “How much did her bike cost?” Looking for the answers will help her pay attention to details in the story.

During

Wondering about a book's topic can keep your child focused on the text. Try this guessing game. Read a page, and think of a question. (“How big do sharks get?”) Say, “Guess what I wonder” and give hints (“I'm wondering something about size”). Once she guesses your question, it's her turn to read while you figure out what she wonders (“Do sharks sleep?”).

After

Together, brainstorm questions to ask after finishing a book. For fiction, your youngster might list “What problem did the characters solve?” or “What would I do in this setting?” For nonfiction, she could suggest, “What new facts did I learn?” or “What did this book make me want to know?” This helps her better understand and remember the story or the information.♥

Reading at the grocery store

The supermarket is packed with words. Try these ideas to help your child learn them:

● Give your youngster coupons for items you need, maybe spaghetti or napkins. When you reach the right aisle, his job is to match the word on the coupon to the product on the shelf. Have him hold the coupon up to the package and spell the word aloud.

● Play “Which one?” At the cheese display, you could say, “Which one says cheddar?” In the spice section, you might ask, “Which one says paprika?” Together, sound out the words on different labels to find the right one.♥

Celebrate Dr. Seuss

Dr. Seuss's creative characters and silly language made him one of the most popular children's authors of all time. Celebrate his March 2nd birthday with these reading and writing activities.

Make a "Seuss-eum." Your child could practice writing about books by creating museum-like displays for Dr. Seuss favorites. Read a book, then let him set out play dough sculptures of characters, drawings of his favorite scenes, and props related to the story (green eggs, anyone?). Next, help him write an index-card plaque for each exhibit. ("Sam was the main character. He did not like green eggs!")

Be an actor. Acting out scenes from the books builds speaking skills. Write the titles of Dr. Seuss books on separate slips of paper, and mix them up in a bowl. Take turns drawing a slip and choosing a part of the book to act out. If you get There's a Wocket in My Pocket, you might pretend to brush your teeth while saying "But that NOOTH GRUSH on my TOOTHBRUSH..." Everyone else tries to guess the book.♥

Fun with Words

Spot the opposite

Playing with opposites is a fun way for your youngster to expand her vocabulary. Enjoy this game.

Secretly pick an item you see, and give your child a clue using an opposite. For a lamp that is on, you could say, "I see something on a table that's the opposite of off." If she needs help, talk it out. "The opposite of off is on. Do you see something that is on?" Once she figures it out, she chooses an object and gives you a clue. For a Lego brick, she might say, "I see something on the rug that's the opposite of big."

Idea: See how many opposites you can think of to describe one thing. If your puppy is small, calm, and sleeping, your youngster could say, "Our dog is big, excited, and awake."♥

Q&A

Read-alouds for everyone

Q I try to read aloud to each of my three daughters every day, but sometimes there isn't enough of me to go around. Any suggestions?

A Sure! On days when you don't have enough time to read to each youngster separately, let everyone snuggle up while you read to them together. It's okay if a book is too easy for one child—she could help you read it to the others. And if a book is too hard for a little one, that's okay, too. She'll get a leg up from being exposed to big words and more complex plots.

If any of your girls has learned to read, she could read to the younger ones. They might create a reading "fort" using couch cushions and read during playtime or while you cook dinner, for instance. As they read or listen to books and talk about them, they will build reading skills. It's a win for everyone!♥

Parent to Parent

A journal-writing tradition

My grandson Keith saw me writing in my journal and mostly to store memories, but he can do whatever he wants—even draw pictures. He decided to sketch the two of us writing together in our journals, and he had me help him write a sentence about his picture.

Keith has stuck with his journal for a couple of weeks already. Now when he comes to my house, he can't wait to share what he has written and drawn.♥

Book Picks

In this laugh-out-loud story, Alec just wants to be left alone to read. So he starts a club with a name sure to keep the other kids away: "The Losers Club." Now the sixth grader can't understand why so many of his classmates want to join him.

■ Who Was Albert Einstein? (Jess Brallier)

This illustrated biography explores the life of physicist Albert Einstein. Einstein was a shy child who struggled in school but grew up to be one of the world's most famous scientists and thinkers. (Also available in Spanish.)

■ Lily's Mountain (Hannah Moderow)

Unwilling to accept that her father died while climbing Mt. Denali, 12-year-old Lily embarks on a mission to rescue him.

Along the way, she uses the many outdoor skills her dad taught her to overcome physical and emotional challenges. A fast-paced adventure tale.

■ The Animal Book (Steve Jenkins)

Does your child know that most of the animals on earth are insects? Or that there are more extinct animal species than living ones? This almanac features hundreds of creatures and interesting facts about where they live, what they eat, how they defend themselves, and more.

Write with a purpose

Whether your youngster is running for student council, writing a story for younger children, or leaving instructions for a pet sitter, keeping her purpose in mind will help her communicate clearly. This advice can help her keep her eye on her goal throughout the writing process.

Keep it front and center

Encourage your child to write her purpose on a sticky note and put it where she'll see it as she works. For instance, maybe she's writing a campaign speech. Her purpose might be "To persuade others to vote for me." This will remind her to include information about how students would benefit from selecting her as their candidate.

Choose words carefully

The words your youngster uses can help her achieve her goal. Say she's writing a story to read to a kindergarten class. Picking words little ones will understand (happy vs. elated) will make her story more entertaining for them. Or if she's writing instructions for a neighbor who's watching her pet iguana over spring break, she could describe the animal's personality (timid, playful). That will tell the sitter how to approach him.

Revise

Suggest that your child reread her writing to make sure every sentence is in line with her purpose. She might add missing points or take out anything that doesn't fit. For example, in a letter to her grandmother, she may realize that she should write about her piano lessons rather than mentioning her favorite video game twice. ▮

Dig deep

As your child gets older, he'll be expected to think more deeply about books. Talk together about what he reads. You may not realize it, but the questions you ask can encourage higher-level thinking on his part! Here are two ideas:

- Pose questions that require more than a one-word answer. Example: "How did the main character change as the story went on?" instead of "Who is the main character?"
- Choose questions that can't be answered by what's in the story alone. Questions that start with "Why do you think..." or "What if..." are good options. ("Why do you think the author ended it that way?" or "What if the story took place 100 years ago?") ▮

The “extra! extra!” benefits of newspapers

Sharing the newspaper every day is an easy way to encourage your youngster to read regularly. Consider these ideas.

Sports recaps. Start by watching a game together. The next day, pick up the sports section, and look for a story about the game. Which highlights does he think the reporter captured well? What would he have added if he were the writer?

Entertainment reviews. Does your child agree with reviewers' opinions? After you see a movie, play, or museum exhibit, let him read a review of it in the newspaper and tell you what he thinks.

Comic strips. Have your youngster choose a comic to read aloud each day at breakfast or dinner. He could use a different voice for each character. At the end of the week, let family members vote for their favorite strip.

Calendar of events. Your child can use the newspaper to plan family outings. Encourage him to look for free community offerings like a farmers' market or a parade. Then, let him announce the time, date, location, and other details. 📅

What's in a contraction?

Words like it's, she'll, and wouldn't add variety to our language and make writing flow smoothly. These contractions are formed by combining two words, with an apostrophe replacing one or more dropped letters. Enjoy these activities.

Talk and listen

Play a game over dinner: no contractions allowed during your conversations! Your child will need to choose her words carefully—and listen closely to others to make sure they don't use a contraction. Who can go the longest? She'll see that without contractions, speech can sound awkward or choppy.

Read and write

Ask your youngster to read a page from a book

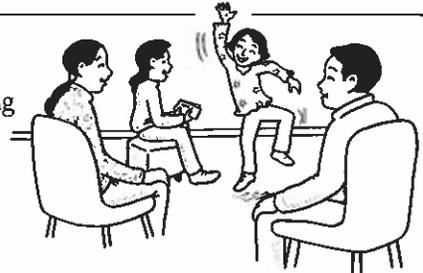

out loud, replacing each contraction with the two words that form it. For example, if she sees you're, she would say you are. Then, have her write each contraction on one side of an index card and the two words that form it on the other side. This will help her remember the correct spelling. 📇

Three cheers for improv

“Improv” lets your child practice speaking and thinking on her feet. Short for improvisational theater, improv involves acting without a script or planning ahead. Try these suggestions for a fun family night.

Guess the character

Each person secretly picks a storybook character (Curious George, Rapunzel). Set a timer for 5 minutes, and take turns being the character you picked. “Curious George” might run and jump around, then say, “I got in trouble today, as usual, but my friend with the yellow hat rescued me.” And “Rapunzel” could act out brushing her long hair while saying, “I can barely hear you up here in my tower!” When the timer goes off, try to guess each other's characters.

One word at a time

Work together to say an outrageous sentence. On each turn, a player may say only one word. The first person might say “I,” the next player could say, “saw,” and so on. (“I saw a big green dragon eating a cheeseburger on the bus.”) After the last word is said, everyone acts out the sentence. One player might be the dragon, another could drive the bus, and everyone else could be passengers, for example. 📅

Q&A Challenging a strong reader

Q My son reads above grade level. But the books he picks out are either too easy or the subjects are too mature. How can I help him stay challenged and find appropriate books?

A Start by talking to his school librarian. She will be able to suggest books on your child's reading level that are appropriate for him. Perhaps classics or historical fiction would be a good fit.

Or nonfiction may be a good choice. Your youngster can look for books with advanced vocabulary that match his interests. Is he a shutterbug? He can check out photography books. Does he like engineering? He might enjoy books about how things work or biographies of engineers.

Keep in mind that it's okay if your son occasionally wants to read easy books or reread old favorites. Reading for fun is an activity that he can enjoy all his life. 📖
